Dear Alex,

Glad to hear you're visiting the National Museum of China! My top recommendation is the Han Dynasty Bronze Wild Goose-and-Fish Lamp.

This lamp is designed as a wild goose with a fish in its mouth. What's special is how it works. When the lamp is lit, smoke rises through its neck and into its body, which is filled with water. There, the smoke is purified by the water, greatly reducing indoor air pollution.

I find its design clever and eco-friendly. It truly reflects the wisdom of the ancient Chinese people. I'm sure you'll like it! (85 词)

Best regards,
Li Hua

Dear Alex,

Glad to hear you're visiting the National Museum of China! I'd like to recommend a remarkable exhibit to you, which is the Bronze Wild Goose-and-Fish Lamp from the Han Dynasty.

This lamp is shaped like a graceful wild goose looking back with a fish in its mouth. What makes it incredible is its function. When the oil burns, smoke travels through the goose's neck into its water-filled body. Then the water captures some of the lamp's pollutants, effectively purifying the air.

This lamp is not just a light source, but a window into how the ancient Chinese combined art, science, and environmental awareness to create practical masterpieces. You'll find it truly impressive. Enjoy your visit! (105 词)

Best regards,
Li Hua

Dear Alex,

Glad to hear that you're visiting the National Museum of China! For an exhibit that I find truly fascinating, I'd recommend the Bronze Wild Goose-and-Fish Lamp from the Han Dynasty.

This lamp takes the form of a wild goose, with its long neck curved gracefully backward and a fish held in its mouth. Beyond its stunning appearance, the lamp's true brilliance lies in its clever design. When it is lit, the smoke produced is channeled through the goose's neck into its body. The water stored inside absorbs some emissions, preventing them from being released into the air. What a remarkable eco-friendly design from 2,000 years ago!

This lamp perfectly combines artistic beauty with practical function, reflecting the incredible wisdom of the ancient Chinese. I believe you'll be deeply impressed by it! (120 词)

Best regards,

Li Hua

For the next week, Megan and Liam busied themselves with the project. They spent a day cleaning the dusty chairs and tables, arranging them to create two areas: one for reading and one for acting. They carefully selected children's books for the reading corner where kids could read and share stories. Megan brought an old carpet from home to serve as a "stage" for acting. With everything ready, they decided to hold the opening on the coming Saturday and made colorful posters inviting everyone. "Liam, you can be the first to act out your dinosaur story," Megan suggested. Liam agreed, already looking forward to the big day. (95 词)

On the opening day of the project, they waited nervously in the garden. When the first few children arrived, Liam eagerly showed them the reading area. As more kids gathered, Megan invited some to sit around the acting area and nodded for Liam to begin. "Did you know I'm a dinosaur that can fly?" Liam, now in a simple dinosaur costume, began his performance with a clear, excited voice. The children watched, laughed, and were completely drawn into the story. The head librarian stopped by, smiling warmly. Megan's heart was full. She understood that a library could also be a place where young readers discovered the pure joy of reading. (备选结尾句: She understood that true peace in a library grows not only from silence, but from creating a place where every reader feels they belong.)
